Littering on 52

PREFACE

There are many social issues we see on a daily basis. Some of us may not take into consideration the fact that they make our community look unpleasant. However, the epidemic of littering just doesn't seem to calm down.

BACKGROUND

As it is known, littering is always an issue. From me coming from the “ghetto” side of Los Angeles, it isn’t uncommon to see trash around you. I always see beer cans roaming the floors, especially near bus stops. As I do take the bus home, it’s no surprise that I see all the trash on the ground.

OBSERVATIONAL DATA AND ANALYSIS

29, September 2018 (11:30 a.m. - 12:20 p.m.)

This day I noticed how there are still a few people that leave behind their trash. While waiting for the bus, I noticed that there were a few people hanging around smoking weed. Not only that but they were as well waiting for the bus to come and so it happened. What I expected; they threw out the blunt and not only that but were very rude to the driver. This day, the bus delayed by about 20 minutes and people were getting quite impatient. I know that public transportation isn't always punctual but people don't seem to understand that. Inclusively, as we were heading back north, the bus driver didn't give courtesy rides so it so happened that someone wanted a free ride and ended up spitting on the window. Truthfully, the person, who was a woman was clearly high and homeless. Not to mention that she had her etnt set up just around the corner from the bus stop.

CONCLUSION

In conclusion, people especially the homeless that build forts on bus stop are the ones who make the community look very trashy. The smell of it and all the trash that surrounds it. Not only that but just seeing the beer cans and the blunt wraps everywhere isn't something people from other areas would like to see.
